Recovery from injury is a slow and methodical process within the equine patient. Healing on the cellular level continues past clinical signs of injury and lameness. Rehabilitation and slow return to work is the most crucial step in recovery that will provide the best possible outcome. The first two or three months in the recovery process is critical in setting up a strong basis for recovery. This can also be the most stressful and time consuming for you.

Great Lakes Equine is a comprehensive provider of equine sports therapy services. Whether you need a month of stall rest or several months of hand walking, controlled turnout and other medical services, we can help your equine companion or athlete return to its full-function and happiness.
